~~Violence And Aggression~~
Nonviolence (or non-violence) is a moral philosophy that rejects the use of violence in efforts to attain social or political change, and proclaims other means such as disobedience or the power of persuasion. While frequently used as a synonym for pacifism, since the mid 20th century the term nonviolence has come to embody a diversity of techniques for waging for social change without the use of violence, as well as the underlying political and philosophical rationale for the use of these ...

While examples of nonviolent action can be traced back at least to the ancient Greeks (Sharp, 1973), much of our current understanding of the psychology of nonviolence begins with the life and writings of Mohandas K.

Gandhi. Gandhi's view on nonviolence had three major facets: ahimsa, satyagraha, and tapasya.

According to Daniel Mayton, “non-violence, as an active behavior, falls clearly within the domain of psychology, however, till date only a handful of psychologists have written about non-violence (e.g., or researched or researched non-violence)”. [4–6] Since Mayton made his comment, a few more publications have enriched this field, including the official Journal of Peace and Conflict: Journal of Peace Psychology, published by the Peace Division 48 of the American Psychological Association.

The development of satyāgraha or nonviolent action to resolve social and political conflicts is Gandhi's most important contribution to modern social psychology. Placing Gandhi's work within the context of psychology, the concept of satyāgraha is examined in relation to psychoanalytic theory, reviewing in particular the work of Erik Erikson and Sudhir Kakar.
