dude! the HD's firmware will not be ported to the Instincts30 and even if it were, do you not realize that the HD is gonna be a hot mess just like Instinct and s30, the same crap Brew OS with "tweaks" is all that will be different and as far as those of you contemplating buying the HD for $199....just dont say that you werent warned! the HD should only be in the $99-$129 price range at the ...

Re: Instinct HD - Sprint Community

My mind is made up about the HD, but I will reserve further comments for a few days until the device is fully exposed. Sprint should have cancelled development of the BREW M850 HD, with the upcoming Android M900 Q carrying the Instinct name forward.

Tag: "hd" in "Samsung Instinct" - Sprint Community

That phone was none other than the Samsung Instinct, which was initially released in the US through Sprint ▯ offering a compelling package when we look back at it. Interestingly enough, the Samsung Instinct wasn't technically classified as a smartphone at all, mainly due to the fact that it wasn't leveraging any of the major smartphone platforms at the time.

Samsung Instinct: A look back at the original iPhone ...

My main concern with the HD having this functionality opened up is that you guys are going to rely on Sprint to write the coding needed in BREW. Developers can write java apps for you, but much like the Instinct, the primary OS BREW is under lock and key and multitouch or lack thereof is found in the OS.
