Struggle For Liberation In Zimbabwe
The two major armed groups campaigning against Ian Smith's government were the Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army (ZANLA), the armed wing of the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU), and the Zimbabwe People's Revolutionary Army (ZIPRA), the armed wing of the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU). The fighting was largely rural, as the two rival movements tried to win peasant support and to recruit fighters while harassing the administration and the white civilians.

The gun interacted with our communities in the heart of the liberation struggle as our brave combatants confronted the enemy. The enemy also used the gun to frustrate the pace and effort of the anti-colonial fight. The counter-ideological motifs of the gun in Zimbabwe's struggle for liberation now manifest in a different form.

Zimbabwe is turning 40 on April 18, hence, it is critical to reflect on the role women played from pre-independent Zimbabwe to date. The country's Independence came after a protracted struggle in which both male and female freedom fighters played a crucial role. Forty years on, it is high time we reflect on progress made, to call for change and celebrate acts of courage and determination by ordinary women, who played an extraordinary role in the history of Zimbabwe.
