In 1948 and 1949, Acheson and Harry Truman were subjected to stinging criticism for allowing Mao Zedong and the Communists to gain the upper-hand in China. Acheson responded by publishing a 1,054-page 'white paper' titled United States relations with China, with special reference to the period 1944-49. Published in early August 1949, it outlined the situation in China, detailed American involvement and assistance to the Chinese and suggested reasons for the failure of the Chinese ...
