Unipolar system (a single superpower) can create stability because nobody can confront its authority and enforce its regulation hence causes stability (Kang 67). Currently, USA is regarded as the superpower but other nation such as European Union, Russia and china are rising. Many problems can arise when these nations start to compete against USA.

In 2002 Krauthammer wrote that US unipolarity could last thirty or forty years “if America did not wreck its economy” (The Unipolar Moment Revisited, 17): in the last years, the US is experiencing an economic crisis “of historic proportions” (Obama, Economic Crisis) which could seriously undermine its hegemony and eventually lead it to concentrate its efforts on its internal problems rather than in world affairs. Overstretched and facing an economic crisis, the US could finally
